Description:

This aluminum sided frame house is a two story, three bay structure with replaced windows, shutters and trim. There is a central entrance sheltered by a shed-roofed porch. There is no central bay opening at the second story level. A shed extension projects to the rear.

This house probably dates from around 1900 although there is a residence indicated on this location in the 1877 Atlas. It was owned by B. Marks. This place portrays the later (post-1860) development that occurred on Funkstown's side streets.
